

Challenging Heights

Call for Contributions!

We are currently looking for blog posts on topics relating to the importance of education, human/child trafficking, children's rights, women's empowerment, modern slavery, and child labour.

Any topics related to these themes will be accepted! You may choose to write about your own experiences, focus on a country that interests you, or any other piece that relates one of the aforementioned topics. Submissions may be by individuals or small teams.

This is a great opportunity if you are interested in any of these topic areas, and want to see your work published on our website. You will also be playing an important role in helping us raise awareness about these very important issues!

Before submitting, please make sure you have read the following guidelines. If you have any questions please send them to publications@challengingheights.org.

Guidelines

- Word limit: 300-600 words.
- Submissions may be in either English or French.
- Must include a short biography (no more than 200 words), and a photo of yourself.
- Must be well referenced with a full bibliography at the end when external sources have been used.
- Submissions should have a short and catchy title.
- All images in your submission that are subject to copyright must be removed.
- Submissions must not be under consideration with other publishers and must not be currently published elsewhere.
- Submission initiates the review process and is taken as prior consent for publication by Challenging Heights.
- If you are under 18, you must send your submission with the Challenging Heights signed parental consent form.

The Process

Once your submission has been received, an editor will confirm receipt and begin the review and editorial process. This may include changes to structure, language and grammar. All authors will be contacted within 4 weeks of submission with our final decision.
